TEMPUS

What to Expect

Genetic counselors are licensed medical providers specially trained to understand genetic tests and how to interpret and explain a person's unique results. Whether you are considering genetic testing, or you already have test results, our genetic counselors can help you make more informed healthcare decisions. You will be contacted via text or a phone call to schedule an appointment. Genetic Counseling appointments will be conducted by phone.

Before Your Appointment:

Gather your personal and family health history. Talk to family members about any health conditions in the family, as well as the age that relatives were diagnosed.

During the Appointment:

Your genetic counselor will:

- Review personal and family medical history and any genetic testing that has been performed
- Assess your risk for inherited genetic conditions
- Answer any questions you have

After the session, an easy-to-understand summary of your discussion and clinical recommendations will be sent to your physician.
